"DELIVERING THE GOODS"

Pal and "Spec" are pals in the grocery store run by freckled-faced Spec's father. They take care of odds and ends around the store, and deliver all of the goods to pap's many customers.

Intermingling with the happy-go-lucky freedom of the store's patronage is a fearful rivalry between two of the employees, Henry and Jerry. Henry is the favored suitor of Marjorie, the grocer's daughter, but Jerry does everything he can to squash Henry's chances with her.

Spec and Pal are sent out to deliver the goods. They have a cannon from which twenty ropes protrude. On each rope is attached a basket of goods and when all of the customers are ready they fire the cannon and the goods ~~are~~ delivered ~~are~~ to the customers.

When ~~they~~ ~~Spec and~~ Pal returns to the store ~~they~~ he is just in time to catch Jerry in the act of "framing" Henry. He changes things around so that Henry is vindicated and Jerry is thrown out of the store. Henry and Marjorie are brought together - and everybody's happy.
